

Writing Instruction K-6

Understanding Process, Purpose, Audience

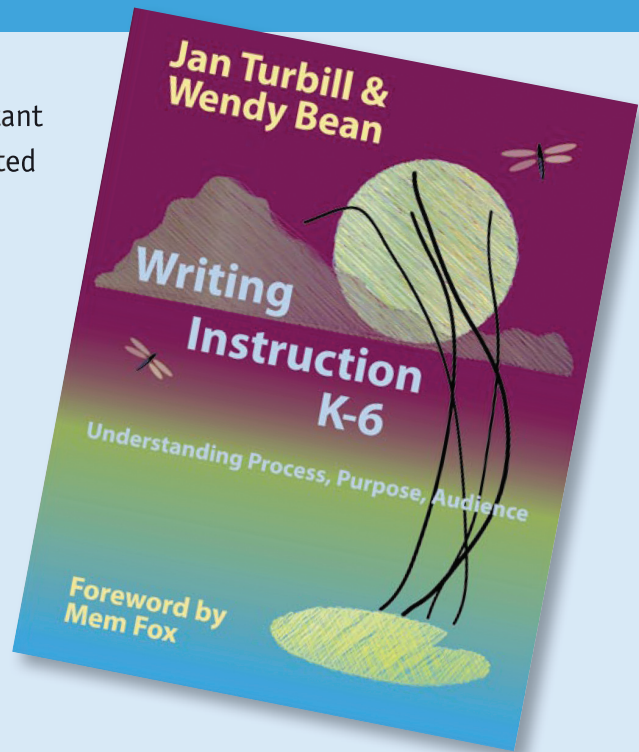

Jan Turbill and Wendy Bean

Foreword by Mem Fox

Jan Turbill and Wendy Bean explore what is important about effective writing instruction, how it is situated within all the modes of literacy, and “why we do what we do” in writing instruction today.

By refocusing on writing process and the essential writing skills while at the same time emphasizing the need for all students to consider audience, purpose, and genre when writing, K-6 teachers will find an effective road map for enhancing their writing instruction.

Included are professional learning activities for teachers, exemplars of children’s writing, and in the appendices, a variety of practical formative assessments and monitoring forms.

“Teachers who want fresh air in their writing curriculum, as well as success for themselves and for their young writers will be inspired as I have been by this easy-to-read book and its quietly revolutionary message.”
